STARTLING DIFFERENCE BETWEEN WORK AT HOME AND IN A SHOP. Tour Times as Much as the Tenement Woma

Gets is Paid for the Same Work in a Shop
How Legitimate Manufacturers Lose their Profits and Sewing Women Starve. On Thursday THE SUN printed a letter from Frank Bonn of 239 Bowery, who called himself a "Baron of the Slop Shop," and was inclined to question the accuracy of THE Sun's statements as to the hours and wages of the sewing women who work on clothing. The women who worked for him. Mr. Bonn said, could make $12 to $15 a week if they would work twelve hours a day, while he worked from 6 in the morning until 10 or 12 at night himself. He advertised continually, he said, for girls to do work at which they could make $10 a week in nine hours a day, and ould not get them.

A visit to Mr. Bonn's shop yesterday showed that, instead of being a "baron of the slop shop," he is himself one of a numerous class of victims of that institution, a man doing business in a legitimate fashion, and forced to comdone by apprentices for nothing and by tenement house sewing women for pittances which would speedily cause a small riot were Mr. Bonn to hint at such wages to the women who

Mr. Bonn makes vests, and he has a whole Mr. Bonn makes vests, and he has a whole floor filled with sewing machines. He runs a regular factory, doing all the work in the shop, and being in no sense a middleman. His employees are skilled workwomen, who have most of them, he says, been with him for years, but who are as independent in circumstances as he is. They have, in fact, a good deal the same relation to him that the slop-shop keepers have to the tenement women. He must pay what they ask or shut up the shop; the tenement women must take what the slop shop gives or go without work.

they ask or shut up the shop; the tenement they ask or shut up the shop; the tenement women must take what the slop shop gives or go without work.

"My girls make bigger wages than I do myself often." said Mr. Bonn, "and they don't work near so hard. Why? Because the competition in the tailoring business keeps down the prices so. These men that pay nothing to their women or get apprentices to do the work spoil the whole trade. Look here! You see that vest? Well, it costs me $1.25 to make it up, and all I get for it is $1. See this one? I got sixty-three cents for it, and it costs me seventy-five to get it made. Why do I do it so cheap? Because I can't get any more, and unless I take it and keep my girls going they will leave me, and when the good season comes and I can make maybe $100 a week. I will have no girls to do the work. I must lose money now or I can make none then.

"What THE SUN prints makes it worse, for already, when I go to the dealers, they want to cut down the price, and, when I tell them I cannot do it for less, they say: 'Oh, yes; you only pay your women fifty cents a day. You will soon be as rich as we are if you charge us so much.' That is the way it will hurt me. The work of the slop shops is not like what I do. I do only the finest kind; but they get the cheap work done so low they think I ought to work low too. I do not see what I am coming to. The girls say I pay them too little now, and the clothing men say I charge them too much, yet already I am charging less than I pay. It would be a great thing if the tenement house work could be abolished, and we regular shops not have to compete with the women that work for nothing; but when you have brought that about I think my girls will all have been married, it will be so long, and I will have no one to do my work. But it is not so that experienced hands can get but fifty cents for fifteen hours' work. If they will come here I will give them plenty of work for three, four. From Mr. Bonn's comfortable shop it was but a step for The Sun reporte for fifteen hours' work. If they will come here I will give them plenty of work for three, four, five times that.

From Mr. Bonn's comfortable shop it was but a step for The Sun reporter to an east side tenement, to several of them, in fact, and to several women in them working on vests. They had sick husbands, young children, or some other incumbrance that kept them from being able to answer Mr. Bonn's advertisements or to do his work. One of them was making a vest for a custom tailor. It was much finer than any Mr. Bonn made, and she would be paid $1.50 for it. That should settle any question of her ability as a workwoman. But custom vests for the tenement house sewing women are as rare as sunlight or fresh air in their dark, small rooms. Usually this woman had to take shop work, and for it accept whatever the men who had it to give out were willing to pay. She said:

"I have been making vests for over twenty-five years, and the prices have gone down until now I have to do them for from 18 to 28 cents apiece. If I make two in a day I must work till nearly midnight, and then I don't do the buttonholes, but must take them to a shop and pay 50 to 75 cents a hundred for them. It is starvation, but what can I do? I have to work at home, and it is all they will pay."

This was one case of hundreds like it, and Mr. Bonn and this poor woman are representatives of two classes who are suffering from the piratical system on which the barons of the slop shops—tools themselves of the great clothing firms—are carrying on business in this city.

On the one hand, the sewing women of the

this city.

On the one hand, the sewing women of the chements are robbed of all compensation except barely enough to keep body and soul together for work harder than any real slave would be asked to do, and, on the other hand, the products of these women's work, put upon the market at prices as low as though they were stolen outright, make it impossible for because in a legitimate of the part of Marguerite.

MRS. DUNN WINS THE SUIT.

The Woman who Took Gen. Dunn Away from Her Can't Have Her House, Too.

In the suit in which Mrs. Maria Cassell, or Maria Gano Robbins, who crowded the wife of Gen. N. Gano Dunn out of the General's affections and finally out of his house, seeks to have enforced a deed she holds for property at the corner of Hudson and West Twelfth streets, which she claims to have purchased from a clerk in Gen. Dunn's office after Mrs. Dunn had transferred it to the clerk, Judge Ingraham, in the Supreme Court, yesterday decided in favor of Mrs. Dunn and set aside the original The facts as to Gen. came out in court last spring, when Mrs. Dunn alleged that the deed to the clerk was signed by her under duress and after a long course of systematic brutality on the part of her husband, including the placing of Mrs. Robbins in actual charge of the household of which Mrs. Dunn was rightfully the mistress.

Gen. Dunn did not appear in the suit, but in a decosition he denied all his wife's charges of brutality. He is supposed to be now in Canada, where he went to evade payment of allmony to his wife.

Judge Ingraham, in his decision dismissing Mrs. Robbins's complaint, says: "The testimony of Mrs. Dunn is entitled to much more credit than the testimony of Dunn. I think that the circumstances under which the deed from Mrs. Dunn was obtained, the violence used toward her, together with the treatment that she had received from her husband, would justify the Court in setting aside the deed. * * The plaintiff cannot claim any title through a deed thus obtained, and even if a bonn fide purchaser for value without notice could claim protection. I am not satisfied that the plaintiff is such a bonn fide purchaser for value without notice could claim protection. I am not satisfied that the plaintiff is such a bonn fide purchaser. The fact that she paid any consideration for the deed rests enlirely upon the testimony of Dunn, and I am not disposed in this case to give his testimony any credit. * * From the testimony in the case it would appear that if any property of the plaintiff was in Dunn's possession it was used by him. with her permission, as his own, and if Dunn was indebted to the plaintiff in any amount she trusted to him to pay her, and not to a lien on any property."

Jack Dempsey and Johnny Reagan met at the Police Gazette office yesterday and posted $500 a side, balance of stakes in their match. The men came up from their training quarters in the morning, and when they met they shook hands cordially. There was a big crowd of hands cordially. There was a big crowd of sports present to see them. Among them were Frank Stevenson, Billy Madden, Mark Maguire, Arty Kerker, Strong Arm Mike Costollo, Billy Dacey, Bob Turnbull, and Tommy Barnes. The articles signed Sept. 13 call for a fight to a finish with skin gloves, London rules, for $1,000 a side and the Police Gazetle diamond belt, which Dempsey now holds. William E Harding, temporary stakeholder, was succeeded by Richard K. Fox. The referee will be named by Mr. Fox on Dec. 9.

The battle will be decided between Dec. 9 and 14 within 100 miles of New York. In addition to the stakes a limited number of spectators will contribute a purse of $1,500, all of which the winner will receive.

Dempsey has been training Jack McAuliffe at Rockaway Reach; the latter is in prime form; he is down to 133 pounds. Dempsey and he leave for Boston on Sunday night. Dempsey will second him against Carney. Veteran Bob Smith has Reagan in hand at Fort Hamilton.

Articles have been signed for a fifteen-round glove fight, under Marquis of Queensberry rules, between Demosey and Goo. La Blanche, The purse is one of $1,500, $300 to the loser, and the battle will be fought in or near Boston after Dempsey's contest with Reagan.

THE COMMITTEE ON BULES MEETING.

PITTRBURGH. Nov. 11.—An important base ball meeting is to be held in this city on Monday next, and it is causing considerable interest among local patrons of the national game. The object of the meeting is to discuss and arrange for playing rules for next year for all base ball organizations controlled by the national agreement. Every one is curious to know what changes will be made, and all kinds of conjectures are in circulation regarding what will be done. The committee is composed of representatives of the National Loague and the American Association.

This afternoon Manager Phillips expressed his opinion regarding the changes that ought to be made in the rules. "Most certainly," said Mr. Phillips, "the rule which gives a man a base hit for a base on balls must be changed. A season's test of this rule has shown it to be an absurdity. No one is satisfied with it except players who cannot hit the ball. The rule simply gives dozens of men a misleading batting average, and no one desires that who wants to see fair play. All the objections which prove that the rule is a bad one have been urged time and timesgain.

"I am certain that the Rule Committee will change it to the old system. I also hope that the committee will reduce the number of strikes from four to three. The present rule allowing a man four strikes before he is out has not proved satisfactory. Both batters and pitchers complain about it, and the public generally desire the old rule of three strikes and out. From what I hear I think the committee will make the rule three strikes out, and live called balls a bas.

"This will answer well. The committee will find a somewhat cool reception in this city on Monday when they arrive, as President Nimick, Secretary Scandrett, Manager Phillips, and the other principal members of the club will appoint men to look siter the visitors and see that they are well entertained. A COTTON FAILURE.

M. Baum Forced to Suspend, and the Ex change Orders an Investigation. M. Baum, a member of the Cotton Exchange, and one of the professional operators of that institution, made an assignment yes-terday to Abram B. de Frece, 35 Broad street. Mr. Baum was formerly of Camden, S. C. He was "short" of the staple, and was mowed down by the sharp advance, particularly on Thursday, when the Agricultural Bureau re-port brought consternation to the bears, and made them rush to cover. Mr. Baum gave Camden, $20,000; Mercantile National Bank. $6,500, for loans, and B. L. Solomon, $2,000, for $6,500, for loans, and B. L. Solomon, reconstions.

There was much comment among the brokers when Mr. Baum announced his suspension. In a few moments this notice was prominently placarded on 'Change'.

In view of the failure of Mr. M. Baum and his reported assignment, making preferences, it is requested that the members of the Exchange who are indebted to him will withhold payment until an investigation of his affairs can be made. This request is made in behalf of the members to whom he is indebted.

can be made. This request is made in behalf of the members to whom he is indebted.

Attached to the notice were the names of such brokers as William V. King, Murchison & Co., John B. Leech, M. B. Fielding, Farman & Co., Chapman & Selter, L. L. de G. Umoens, and Hancky & Blordan. It was charged that Mr. Baum collected all the money due him on contracts on Wednesday and Thursday, and falled to provide for contracts which had turned out to be unprofitable to him. Mr. Baum denied this, and added that any moneys he had collected on the days mentioned had been deposited in his bank and used to liquidate as far as possible the claims of the brokers against him. He remarked that he had only a $10 bill left after the assignment, and thought that was pretty good evidence of his business sincerity and integrity.

Prices for cotton receded somewhat yesterday, but one of the largest business days in the history of the Exchange was recorded. The sales were 299,000 bales.

BAD TASTE ON THE STOCK EXCHANGE. An Indecent Exhibition of Horse Play Apre-

pos of the Execution of the Ausrehista. Some of the members of the Stock Exchange whose ideas of humor found expres-sion on a previous occasion in the hazing that proved fatal to the late "Cross-town" Cary attempted to excite merriment yesterday by the brutal treatment of one of their fellow members. Mr. J. F. Reimler is one of the most members. Mr. J. F. Reimler is one of their reliow inoffensive members of the Exchange, and he confines himself to his business, which is the execution of orders in the Denver stocks. In some respects he resembles the typical carleatures of an Anarchist, or, at least, some of his brother members think so. Besides, he doesn't fancy horse play. Yesterday some of the boys adjusted a hangman's noose upon the post in the Denver group just above where Mr. Reimler was attending to his business. They also fastened some red flags to the post, and then jeered at their associate.

This method of celebrating the execution of the Anarchists aroused a good deal of feeling in the Exchange, which was unabated at the close of business. The prevailing view was that the Exchange had been degraded by the thoughtlessness of some of its members, and that Mr. Reimler had been abused in a manner that called for the discipline of those who took part in publicly maligning and tormenting him. As no fines were imposed by the Chairman it is likely that the matter will be brought before the Governors.

These transfers were made in the Police Department yesterday: Roundsman Fuchs from Prince street to Delancey street, Policefrom Prince street to Delancey street, Folice-men George Smith from the Harbor squad to the Sanitary squad, Fitchen from the Sanitary squad to Forty-seventh street, Madigan from Eighty-eighth street to Morrisania, and Hag-gerty from Leonard street to Thirtleth street, He was also made precinct detective in place of Policeman Reilly, who was remanded. Po-liceman Bolster was retired. Foliceman Tim-othy Shea of the Fitty-inluth street squad was dismissed for intoxication.

foreign markets and dealers were apparently the first factor that contributed to this change in the course of prices. Their action was due to a more hopeful feeling relative to the Emperor William and the Crown Prince. The change in the tone abroad naturally encouraged domestic operators on the long side, and as the day advanced everything seemed to fa-vor their plans and ventures. The peaceful outlook at Chicago prior to the execution of the Anarchists, and the fact that that event was not followed by any breach of the peace, also tended to inspire greater confidence in the speculative situation. It now appears that the several large mercantile concerns, the failure of which the bears have been confidenly counter prices have imagined. The absolute coner prices have imagined. The absolute contradiction of the reports reflecting upon these concerns, together with the relaxation of the money market from the rising tendency shown for the last two days, also contributed to the results noted.

The market is still largely swayed by the course of Reading, which to-day attained greater prominence than at any time. It supplied a very large proportion of the transactions, and closed 2½ went higher than yesterday at practically the highest price. All of the coal stocks were in fair demand, possibly on account of the decision of the companies to advance the rate upon their anthracite traffic 25 cents a ton. St. Paul ranked next to Reading in point of activity, with Lackawanna, Richmond Terminal, and Eric contending for the third place. The movement outside of Reading was uniform and the transactions well distributed. A number of the specialties were conspicuous, notably the East Tennessee securities. Hocking coal, Manitoba and Hocking Valley. The movement in the securities of the lastnamed company appeared to be based upon the boilef that the decision in the suit of the company against the former management to recover $5,000,000 would be decided in favor of the company. As a matter of fact there were no special developments of importance affecting prices. The upward movement was the hadran as a seller of stocks, though the publications that reflect its views continue to predict disasters.

was occasioned by the use of Faine. I suffered agonies for two years from malaria and dyspepsia. I could not sleep, my weight fell sixty pounds, and no matter how light the food or the quantity eaten, it osused distress. I spent hundreds of dollars in doctors' fees and for medicine without benefit. Three months ago I heard of Parine,

HISTORY OF THE INQUISITION OF THE MIDDLE AGES. BY HENRY CHARLES LEA. To be completed in THREE VOLUMES. Vol. I. (Origin and Organization of the Inquisition), pp. xiv., 584, published this day, 8vo, Cloth, uncut edges, gilt tops, $3.00. Vol. II. (The Inquisition in the Several Lands of Christendom) will be ready in December; and Vol. III. (Special Fields of Inquisitorial Activity) in February, 1888.

No comprehensive history of the Inquisition based on the results of modern scholarship, has yet been attempted, although the subject is one of the highest interest, not only to the general reader, but also to the student of civilization and the philosophical inquirer into the aberrations of the human conscience. No writer on the Inquisition hitherto has had the patience or the courage to investigate the social, the spiritual, and the intellectual condition of mediaval Europe, out of which arose, as a necessary development of the forces at work, that portentous institution which for so many centuries sought, with more or less success, to fetter the human mind. No one, moreover, is fitted for the execution of such a task who is not tolerant to the point of tolerating intolerance-who cannot recognize that the wise and good could conscientiously believe it to be their highest duty to God and man to exterminate at any cost all dissidence of belief, and to compel all wanderers back to the path of salvation. Yet such tolerant spirit need not blind the inquirer to the evil wrought in the conviction that it was good, nor to the crimes through which the ambitions of prince and prelate sought the accomplishment of their ends by the use of the terrible weapon placed in their hands by honest and misguided fanati-

It has been the object of the author of the present work to produce a history based on these foundations and influenced by this spirit. His previous writings have made him known as an earnest student of mediaval institutions, and have fitted him for the present undertaking. For fifteen years he has been collecting material for it-material which has grown enormously through the well-directed researches of recent scholars, and which has not hitherto been co-ordinated and utilized for such purpose. Besides this, he has had correspondents at work in all the libraries and archives where unprinted records are to be found, and he has thus obtained a large amount of new matter, much of which throws valuable light on many hitherto obscure points. He has devoted special attention to the pacuitar legal processes devised and introduce i by the Inquisition, and in these has found an explanation of much that has hitherto been imperfectly understood, as in the cases of the Templars and of John Huss, and in the development and persecution of sorcery and witcheraft. He has based his labors as far as possible on a conscientious examination of the original sources, and it may safely be said that a large portion of his volumes will be novel even to the well-read historical student.

First Thomas Rebearent of the Brooklyn

Giuck, Dvorak, Liszt, and Wagner were the composers represented. Schubert's ninth symphony was the initial number. It received a perfect performance. As a work of art it ranks among the greatest, and that Thomas recognizes its worth is made evident not alone by the sympathetic reading given of the score. but by the fact that he has so studied it and familiarized himself with it that he conducted throughout without reference to the score. There was one feature of the concert that certainly added much to the effectiveness of the rendering. The musicians' seats are arranged in tiers at the Academy, and the elevation of the wood, wind, and brass instruments above the general body of strings gave them more the general body of strings gave them more prominence in plano passages and effected a fuller general tone than is attained when all the players are on the same level. Nothing could be more beautiful than the effect of the mellow notes of the trombones in an off-repeated passage of the first movement, an effect enhanced by the prominence given these instruments from their location. The long and ante movement was played without cuts, and its tireless beauties make one wonder that conductors ever deem it necessary to shorten it. On general principles it may be taken for granted that Schubert knew what he was about when he was writing his symphonies.

The Gluck selection was the well known "Che Faro," from Orpheus, and Mme. Helene Hastreiter was the singer. In this air Mme. Hastreiter was no saperiors. Her rendering is exquisitely finished and full of feeling. Jast a bit more rehearsing with the ordestra might have improved the ensemble for the violins, which carry the air with the voice, were not prompt in following her shading in passages where she interpreted the ritard and accelerate marks at will. This is a fault almost inevitable in the works of the old masters, who wrote accompanients in strict form, rather than, as modern writers do, making them individual features of a whole. When Mme. Hastreiter came to sing Liszt's "Mignon" in the second part of the concert, there was no instant when the orchestra seemed to be at variance with her. The difference was due wholly to the fact that the vocal melody is not carried straight through by the violins or other instruments, Both these numbers were full of interest to the listeners, and Mme. Hastreiter was recalled several times.

Divorak's original "Hustizka" overture was played with all the finish that characterizes the Thomas directed from memory, and the noble composition was performed in a style wholly becoming to its worth.

The second concert of this series will be especially interesting, inasmuch as the programme is made up entirely of compositions by Bestho prominence in plano passages and effected a fuller general tone than is attained when all

Charles Dickens's Reading.

A fine audience met Mr. Charles Dickens at Chickering Hail yesterday afternoon. Bevies of school girls occupied solid sections in different parts of the house and turned rows of bright animated faces toward the reader. Mr. Dickens's voice was husky, but he did not seem to mind it much, nor did his audience. The selections were from "David Copperfield," touching upon Peggotty, David, and Emily at the boat house, the advent of Steerforth, Emily's flight, David and Dora's flirst quarrel, and Steerforth's death. These were followed by "Bob Sawyer's Party," and all were received with unmistakable signs of satisfaction by the audience. While perhaps the pathetic scenes gained nothing from the reader, Mr. Dickens's unctuous rendering of English low life does assist the humor of the novelist. Mrs. Raddles and Raddles seem to be funnier than ever when the tones of their voices are heard. One direct result of Mr. Dickens's enterprise will undoubtedly be renewed interest in his father's novels, and especially among the younger generation, which is at present more familiar with the works of the Duchess. seem to mind it much, nor did his audience.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 11. - Barton Mc-Guckin, the English tenor, made his second appearance to-night in the National Opera Academy was packed to the door with a $5,000 audience, who received the fine performance of the new tenor with the greatest enthusiasm. Emma Juch gave a beautiful rendering of the part of Marguerile.

Isidore Stern (Stern Brothers & Co.) an attachment against the property of Sigmund Brunswick and Morris Bie (Sigmund Brunswick & Co.), dealers in diamonds at 75 Maiden lane, in a sult to recover $3,247.20 for goods delivered. The plaintiffs allege that Brunswick & Co. have disposed of their goods with intent to defraud creditors. Leopold Stern makes an affidavit in which he says that the defendants carried a stock worth $75,000. He swears that on Nov. 9 he called at their place of business and told Brunswick that he had heard something was wrong about the firm's affairs, and Brunswick admitted they had done away with all their assets. He said that they had been disposed of to his father-in-law, Mr. Pings of Pings & Pinner.

Stern threatened to attach the creditors. Leopold Stern makes an affidavit to his father-in-law, Mr. Pings of Pings & Pinner.

Stern threatened to attach the property of Brunswick & Co., whereupon the defendant said nothing would be gained by that, and that Stern would have only his trouble for his pains. Stern then told Brunswick he would have the affair investigated, but the latter smiled and told him to go ahead. He said everything had been turned over to protect it from creditors, so that none of the stock could be attached, that Stern might call a meeting of creditors, and that if they were not satisfied with the terms proposed by Brunswick they would get nothing at all.

Franklin Bien, counsel for Lindenbaum & Weill. Levy & Co., and William M. Smellie of London, Outmann Bros, of Paris, Tannenbaum & Co., John W. Block & Co., L. Sanger, Maurice Weil, and other creditors in this city have also procured attachments against the property of D. Brunswick.

Col. Fellows will go Duck Shooting. It was reported at the District Attorney's office yesterday that Col. Fellows was tired out by the strain of the recent successful campaign, and would take a few days' recreation. He and would take a few days' recreation. He will leave the city on Monday accompanied by Herman Oelrichs, a member of the Carroll Island Club, for Baltimore, and thence to Carroll Island in the Chesapeake Bay. Duck shooting and fishing will enable them both to forget business cares for a while. The Colone says that he has been overwhelmed with letters congratulating him on his election. When he returns he will be able to pitch into his duties with a new zest.

Death of Peter Duffy, Centenarian. Peter Duffy, an alleged centenarian, died at 396 Seventh avenue yesterday. Duffy had been fifty years in New York. In his younger days he drove a truck, tended funerals, or did anything that offered, but for sixteen years, since he broke his hip by a fall, he has done since he broke his hip by a fail, he has done no work of any kind. A married niece took care of him. Duffy was a bachelor. Duffy used to say that he was a big lad at the time of the Irish rebellion, and as a man working in the fields saw the soldiers returning home after the battle of Waterloo. During the last cholera epidemic here he rendered efficient service in removing the dead. Duffy neither smoked nor chewed, and did not get drunk. On every election day, up to his ninety-eighth year, Duffy voted the straight Democratic ticket.
